About DPHHS ~ Child & Family Services Division (CFSD)

The mission of Child and Family Services Division is to keep children safe and families strong. CFSD provides state and federally mandated protective services to children who are abused, neglected, and/or abandoned. CFSD receives and investigates reports of suspected child abuse and neglect, provides protective care for children, assists families in addressing safety concerns for their children, trains and supports foster/adoptive parents, and ensures long-term permanent placements for children who cannot return home. CFSD also provides in-home services to families and education in domestic violence prevention.

Annual Prevent Child Abuse & Neglect Conference

The Annual Prevent Child Abuse and Neglect Conference in Montana offers a three-day venue with a variety of presenters and topics. The goal of the Conference is to provide training and education in current prevention efforts and other areas of child welfare practice to social workers, foster/adoptive parents, attorneys, service providers, and other community professionals.

Several disciplines are represented by the presenters, who include researchers, educators, authors, clinicians, consultants, legal professionals, service providers, law enforcement personnel, and motivational speakers. The Conference staff is excited to offer an extensive selection of topics to choose from concerning practice issues and prevention, intervention, and treatment efforts in child abuse and neglect cases. We hope that you will join us in "Weaving a Community of Prevention" as we discuss current issues facing the children and families that we work with.

Conference Offerings

The 2006 Prevent Child Abuse & Neglect Conference offers four general session KeynoteSpeakers throughout the three days as well as numerous breakout sessions to choose from. In addition, on Tuesday, we will enjoy a luncheon with entertainment by Allegro School of Dance, an artistic ballet dance group. Wednesday is jam packed with numerous breakout sessions by presenters from around the nation followed by a reception during the evening with hors d'oeuvres and flute music by Walter Runsabove. Finishing the conference on Thursday is the Celebration of Children Breakfast with many state and local dignitaries in attendance, followed by one last Keynote speaker and door prizes afterwards.

The following continuing education credits are being applied for: CEU, CLE, POST, OPI.

Informational Booths

The 2006 Prevent Child Abuse and Neglect Conference is proud to offer an excellent opportunity for participants to promote new working relationships, exchange information and ideas, and network with providers from around the state by offering informational booths.

Keynote Presentation: 2:00 - 4:45 pm

Allison Turkel, Senior Attorney
Chief of Training, American Prosecutor's
Research Institute, National Center for the Prosecution of Child Abuse

What You Do Does Matter: Unto a Third Generation,

A Call to End Child Abuse in the United States

within 120 Years

Each professional involved in the fight against child abuse makes a difference with each case that they handle, each child that they provide services to, each child they remove from an abusive environment and with each prosecution that holds the abuser responsible for violating our most precious resource. Yet, the work can be frustrating, overwhelming and depressing.

Based on Victor Vieth's "Unto a Third Generation" paper, this keynote presentation will detail the accomplishment we have made so far in the fight against child abuse and will provide an overview of a plan to eradicate child abuse within 120 years. This plan addresses mandatory reporting, improved training for first responders, a national initiative on forensic interviewing and offers a solution that is global as well as personal. Furthermore, strategies for working effectively in multidisciplinary teams will be discussed.

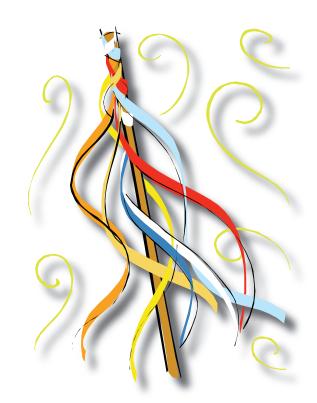

Dinner: 4:45 – 7:00 pm (on your own)

Keynote Presentation: 7:00 pm - 8:30 pm

Regina Kupecky, LSW

Attachment & Bonding Center of Ohio My Brother, My Sister: Sibling Relations in Adoption & Foster Care

Sibling relations have been an important but often ignored issue in adoption and foster care for many years. Reunification and kinship placements have received much attention in the field. At the same time, the needs of very close kin, siblings, are often shuffled to the rear. In this session, the importance of siblings throughout an individual's lifespan and the benefits experienced by children when placed with their siblings will be discussed. This information and knowledge will help us better plan for the best interests of children as well as their siblings.

Wednesday, April 26, 2006Breakout Session 1: 8:30 – 10:00 am

Linda Chezem

Working with the Alcoholic Adult in Child Protection

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism is the leading alcohol research agency for the United States. The NIAAA Social Work curriculum contains evidence-based information on family dynamics, recidivism rates, research on successful interventions/treatment, what children experience in the alcoholic family, best practices in working with alcoholic clients, etc. We will review this curriculum to help identify how social workers can engage families who struggle with alcohol abuse & dependency better – what do we need to know? We will also learn about the brain and genetics and the relationship to human development. Participants will identify problems caused by alcohol in caring for children and will learn how to apply the research from NIAAA in their work in child protection services.

Regina Kupecky

My Brother, My Sister: Sibling Relations in Adoption & Foster Care (Part 1 of 2)

In this session participants will become aware of the common reasons siblings get separated in adoption and foster care and will be able to identify valid and invalid reasons for the separation of siblings in placement. Grief and loss issues experienced by children in the child welfare system who have lost siblings will be explored and participants will be able to identify common triggers to grief in connection to being separated from siblings.

Allison Turkel

Preparing Children for Court... and the Court for Children

Now that the investigation is done and court is imminent...what is the child expecting? Has television increased their knowledge of the courts or contributed to their apprehension of testifying? What can we do to make the process less of a mystery and prepare not only the child for court, but also their caregivers and the court for children? Come learn about linguistics, memory and suggestibility, preparation techniques and strategies for making the court room more child friendly.

Randi Hankins

Medication's Brave New World: Second Generation Neuroleptics With Children & Adolescents

Originally developed as atypical antipsychotics, meds such as Abilify, Seroquel, Geodon and others are finding increasing use as mood stabilizers, antidepressants and antianxiety medications. Learn the mechanisms of action as well as the benefits and side effects of these meds as their use rapidly expands in child and adolescent populations.

Andrea Hammond & Karen Lane

The War at Home: The Effects of Domestic Violence on Children

This session will examine the emotional, verbal, and physical battlefield that is domestic violence including the long range implications that being raised in this environment can have on children's development: emotionally, cognitively and physically. Includes hands-on tools for screening for domestic violence, responding appropriately to children's disclosures, and tools for working with community partners and non-offending parents. Primary prevention that goes beyond working with the survivors in providing a community accountability model for all aspects of healthy child development will also be examined.

Adoption/Foster Care Support Group Panel

How do you build a successful support group for foster and adoptive parents? What works and what doesn't?

Members from adoption/foster care support groups from around the state share their success stories. Learn what creative approaches and activities these groups have utilized in supporting one another as they manage their way through the rewarding, yet often complex world of resource parenting.

Diane Baird

Visitations in Child Welfare – Building Health vs. Reinforcing Pathology (Part 1 of 2)

Foundations for Supervised Visitations - Caution: Myths may be debunked in this session! Come learn how visitations can be used to rehabilitate the parent-child relationship and how your observations can help set goals and define intervention strategies for parents. Child abuse and neglect can be seen as a disorder in the attachment relationship between the parent and child; visitations can be an extremely powerful treatment modality in repairing this attachment. Specific developmental considerations for infants and toddlers will be addressed.

Nancy Underwood Long

The METH Epidemic

The Meth Epidemic is affecting all of us. This session will provide social workers, foster parents, kinship care providers, adoptive parents, and administrators with educational tools that they can use in: recognizing a Meth lab, reporting a Meth lab, and identifying how Meth affects our children. Specific topics include: Meth and Crime – The Who, What, Where, and Why; Meth Labs – Methods, Signs, Dangers, Property Owners and Clean-up; Drug Endangered Children – Risk, Susceptibility and Effects, Treatment, Family Drug Courts, Prevention, Education, Enforcement, Legislation and Meth Watch.

Regina Kupecky

My Brother, My Sister: Sibling Relations in Adoption & Foster Care (Part 2 of 2)

What are the benefits of placing siblings together? Learn about these benefits and how to better plan for the best interests of the child as well as their siblings. Specific issues in adopting sibling groups will be discussed and identifying services that families might need when parenting sibling groups.

Allison Turkel

When a Child Takes it Back: Recantation in Child Abuse Cases

A child may recant for a variety of reasons, including secrecy, inducements by perpetrators, lack of support from the non-offending caregiver, societal attitudes regarding the sexual abuse of children, or the child's interactions with professionals within the criminal justice system. In this session the dynamics of child sexual abuse will be delineated so that prosecutors and their colleagues can properly prepare for and react to a recantation. A recantation creates a new investigation, because most often there has been some sort of intervention. Investigation and prosecution strategies will be discussed.

Foster Youth Panel

Montana foster youth speak out about their personal journeys through the foster care system. Listen as they share their stories of adversity, hope, and growth and learn how we can better serve children in care based on their experiences – both positive and negative. What can we learn from these youth? Perhaps more than we can anywhere else!

Diane Baird

Visitations in Child Welfare – Building Health vs. Reinforcing Pathology (Part 2 of 2)

Skill Building for Visitation Supervisors – This session will build on the information learned in Session 1 and will provide practical skills for intervention in supervised visitations. Videotaped sessions of visitations will help the participant learn intervention strategies in assisting parents in repairing their attachment with their child and with each other.

Case Building to Permanence: A Social Work and Legal Guide to Achieving Permanence for Children (Part 1 of 2)

This two-part session will examine the three major plans for permanence – reunification, adoption, or kinship care – and provide a social work and legal framework for evaluating and achieving the appropriate plan from initial social services intervention throughout the court process. All participants in the juvenile court process including social services, CASA/GAL, courts, parents, attorneys, and community service providers have important roles in this process and must understand the effect the child welfare system has on children and families and the need to balance child protection and preservation of the family with the commitment to permanence.

Ron Clevenger

The Methamphetamine Brain

Explore the physiological affects of Methamphetamine on children, from conception to birth and throughout childhood. This session will provide an understanding of how Methamphetamine affects the brain and the factors that influence use and abuse of this drug. The medical and biological framework for understanding the devastating effects that METH has on the developing brain of the child will be discussed, as well as Meth's long-term affects.

Beverly Engel

Breaking the Cycle of Abuse: Healing & Prevention

Those who come from abusive or neglectful backgrounds are generally not offered courses or therapeutic programs that will help them to clear up the debris of their childhood before becoming a spouse or parent. This session will present a comprehensive Healing and Prevention Program that professionals can offer their clients in order to help them avoid becoming abusive, offer assistance to those who have already begun to abuse, and help clients avoid repeated victimization. Those who perpetuate the cycle of neglect and abuse do so because they are out of control and feel they have no other options. This workshop, based on Beverly's book, Breaking the Cycle of Abuse (John Wiley and Sons, 2004), will provide short-term and long-term strategies to help clients gain control over their emotions and will offer alternatives to their old ways of reacting to stress, anger, fear, and shame. These strategies will produce immediate, tangible results and can be used immediately. Each participant will go through the program as if they were a client. This "hands on" approach will not only act as a teaching tool but will help professionals face important truths about their own childhood, their denial systems, and their parenting practices.

Dudley Weeks

The Partnership Life Skills

Have you ever been in a conflicted situation in child welfare? Of course you have! This session will help you explore practical skills critical to effective relationships and conflict resolution. Learn how to create a partnership atmosphere that can be mutually beneficial and productive.

Achieving Permanence for Native American Children Through Custom and Tradition

Adoption has been a negative word to many Indian people for generations. The word has been tainted by the fact that many tribes have lost their children to adoptive placements – many of them to non-Indian families. Yet adoption is not a new concept to Indian people. By custom and tradition (without the termination of parental rights), as well as by mainstream adoption, many Indian families continue to expand their families through adoption. This workshop will focus on how some tribes are looking toward the past to plan a future for Indian children. Some tribes are incorporating traditional adoptions practices, finding permanence for Indian children in the child welfare system through historical tribal adoptions. Come and learn how adoption by tribal custom and tradition – without termination of parental rights – can be a path to permanency for some Native American children.

Barbara Sample

In-Home Services Training - Visitors

This session is a training provided specifically for in-home services providers. In-home family workers will have the opportunity to discuss the referrals with which they work, how to build a relationship with and engage the family, improving parenting skills, and addressing the families' needs. Presenters will discuss staffing cases with referring agencies, locating resources and making referrals based on family needs, and responding to crises. Data collection, research, and other paperwork requirement woes will be discussed.

Adoption/Foster Care Support Group Panel - Same as Breakout Session 1 – repeated.

Early Childhood Development: Implications for Court

Weighing parental rights versus children's needs is a Solomon-like decision for the court, but one that is often forestalled until the child can use language or the parent has failed a sufficient number of times. Yet by then, major damage to the child may already be done. This talk will review early childhood brain development (birth -3 years) and the permanently debilitating effects of chronic abuse and neglect on the developing child, as well as the effects of intervening or removal of the child. Custodial, visitation, and permanency decisions can be more in the best interest of the child if they take into account issues of brain development, attachment, environment stability, and the cognitive capacity of the child.

Parenting the Sexually Abused Child

Children who have been sexually abused need special help in learning how to cope with their victimization. In order to provide the most positive support possible, parents need help in overcoming their own feelings of shame regarding sexual matters in general and sexual abuse in particular, as well as help in coming out of denial about any experiences of sexual abuse they may have had in childhood. In this workshop, parents and advocates will learn how to help sexually abused children deal with shame, rage, pain, and fear in constructive, positive ways in order to facilitate their healing and to help prevent them from passing on the abuse to other children.

In-Home Services Training – Supervisors

This session is a training provided specifically for in-home services providers supervisors. Contractors of family support and preservation services face significant challenges meeting the needs of the contract and the families they serve, as well as conforming to the milieu of the agency itself. This workshop will review the requirements of the federal Adoption and Safe Families Act, the referral process, intensity of services, engagement of difficult families, staffing patterns, on-call, supervision of paraprofessionals, training, liability, and other topics related to successful intervention. Presenters will discuss opportunities for establishing a research-based outcomes-driven model and meeting the oversight needs of case notes.

Partnering in Conflict: Principles for Effective Interaction

In the world of child welfare, it's easy to become frustrated and disillusioned given all of the competing interests of everyone involved. If we are all working towards the same goal, how is it that sometimes it feels like we are all speaking different languages? How can we possibly find a solution that meets all of our needs? Dr. Weeks will present practical principles in this session to empower you to move beyond impasse, deal effectively with immediate conflicts, and build improved relationships that are sustainable and mutually beneficial. His model goes far beyond the traditional "bargaining mediation" approach and builds within the conflict parties the capacity to deal effectively with the roots of a conflict in a sustainable way, not merely "fix" a particular conflict.

Breakfast: 8:00 - 10:00 am

The Celebration of Children Breakfast

Join us in celebrating and recognizing professionals in the child welfare system that have made a difference! Several Montana dignitary speakers will join us, including Lieutenant Governor John Bohlinger and Supreme Court Justice Jim Rice, who will speak on their vision for our most precious resource, our children. Shirley Brown, CFSD Administrator, will moderate the Breakfast. Also invited are Attorney General Mike McGrath, District Court Judge Jeffrey Sherlock, Mayor Jim Smith, and DPHHS Director Joan Miles. Enjoy a served breakfast and help us celebrate our commitment to Montana's children.

Keynote Presentation: 10:15 - 11:45 am

D.J. Vanas

Internationally Acclaimed Motivational Storyteller

Keeping the Fires Lit

Join D.J. for a dynamic session to renew your sense of purpose, passion, and performance as you work to build strong and healthy communities. Using wisdom discovered in traditional Native American ceremonies, you will learn the true purpose of a warrior - not what we see on TV or in movies. Warriors of the past spent their lives developing their talent and abilities to become assets to the village they served. Today that "village" can be your family, community, clients - anyone you serve...and in order to create success within the community, we must first be able to take excellent care of ourselves and "keep our fires lit". In this session, D.J. will show you effective strategies to boost your motivation, stay focused, lower your stress, and keep your spirit strong as you continue to serve others. Get ready to laugh, learn, and look at your life in a whole new light!

Andrea Hammond, JD is the Executive Director for the Montana Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence, Helena, MT. Andrea has accumulated over 14 years experience in the domestic violence, sexual assault and child abuse fields. Her experience as a family violence prosecutor, women and children's direct service advocate, and as one of the key personnel who designed the Safe Starts interventions programming nationally for children exposed to domestic violence makes her well versed in the long lasting effects that experiencing trauma can have on children's development. Her long-standing role as an advocate, grants manager and program developer add to her ability to provide training and technical assistance to family and sexual violence advocates throughout Montana.

Karen Lane, MEd is the Montana State Coordinator for DELTA (Domestic Violence Prevention Enhancements and Leadership Through Alliances). She collaborates with prevention partners at the local, state and national levels. She draws on her education and over 25 years experience as a domestic violence advocate, community mental health counselor, researcher, college and grade school teacher, non-profit manager/fundraiser to provide training and technical assistance. On the staff of the Montana Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence in Helena, she promotes primary prevention of Intimate Partner Violence with a focus on keeping the violence from happening in the first place.

Diane Baird, LCSW is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker from Denver, CO with 30 years of experience in child welfare. She holds a bachelor's degree in education and earned her MSW from Tulane University Graduate School of Social Work in New Orleans in 1981. Diane has worked in the child welfare departments as a worker and supervisor, and was employed at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center at the Kempe National Center for the Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect from 1986 to 1997, where she learned, worked and studied with many of the finest scholars and clinicians in the field. She served as Clinical Director for a small Child Placement Agency for several years and now works full time in private practice in the Denver area. Diane's theoretical base is grounded in attachment theory and child development, family dynamics and ego psychology. Clinical work occupies approximately one third of her professional time, and she is endlessly intrigued by the complexities of parent-child relationships, especially in infancy and toddlerhood. Ms. Baird has consultation contracts with a variety of agencies, including the Jefferson County Department of Health and Environment, Lutheran Family Services of Colorado, the Colorado State Department of Human Services, and county departments of human services. She is devoted to sharing what she has learned and regularly teaches at gatherings of all disciplines, including the Judiciary, county attorneys, guardians ad litem, CASA volunteers, child welfare workers, university classes, law students, visitation specialists, and just about anybody who asks!

Nancy Underwood-Long, Washington State Community Relations Coordinator, Families for Kids (www.familiesforkids.org), A Program of Lutheran Community Services Northwest, Everett, WA has worked for Families for Kids for 5 years in a variety of positions. In her current position, she develops business and community partnerships to benefit abused and neglected children. Nancy became a foster parent when the best friend of her oldest daughter "needed a place to stay". Nancy and Greg epitomize the Families for Kids motto: "Room for one more". Nancy's professional and educational background is in product marketing. She left the Seattle dot.com arena in 2001 and has never looked back. Nancy is a member of several Washington State County Methamphetamine Action Teams in Washington and is a member of Attorney General R. McKenna's Meth Task Force. She has been conducting trainings for non-profit and for-profit agencies for 3 years on the Meth Epidemic, including the Washington Association of Pupil Transportation (WAPT), Washington State Public Utility Districts, and Department of Social and Health Services staff and foster and adoptive parent support groups. Nancy's presentation includes a 66 page Power Point Presentation with accompanying resource literature from the Washington state Drug Clearinghouse along with the Drug Endangered Children Protocol and information from the National Nursing Association on the affects of Meth poisoning for children.

Jane Malpass, MA holds a masters degree in counseling and has thirty years experience in the child welfare field, as a social worker, supervisor, director of a family violence shelter, trainer, and consultant. She was a social work consultant for the North Carolina Division of Social Services form 1980 until 2003, providing consultation and training in all areas of child welfare services for the county Department of Social Services. Ms. Malpass has been a regular presenter at the juvenile law training of district court judges and many statewide conferences. In addition, she has been a presenter at annual conferences of the National CASA Association since 1992, as well as over a dozen state CASA Association conferences. Presently, she works as a consultant for county departments of social services and a licensed child-placing agency, Another Choice for Black Children. Her husband is the Guardian ad Litem Administrator for a North Carolina Judicial District. They are the parents of six children, three of whom are adopted. She and Jane Thompson are the authors of The Myth of Best Interest: Why Good Intentions Are Not Enough, a guide to building a case for permanence for all children in the child welfare system.

Jane Thompson, JD holds a law degree form the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Since 1981 she has served as a child welfare attorney with the North Carolina Attorney General's office. In that position she consults with and trains 33 county departments of social services on all aspects of child welfare law and has litigated dozens of juvenile trial court and appellate cases. Jane has provided mandated legal aspects of child welfare training for NC social workers and currently provides training on legal aspects of adoption to both social workers and clerks of court. She has served on the North Carolina Supreme Court Permanent Families Task Force and the Adoption Study Commission of the North Carolina General Assembly. Ms. Thompson served on the drafting committee that rewrote North Carolina's adoption law in 1996. She is active with the North Carolina Association of Social Services Attorney's, serves on the Court Improvement Project legislation committee, and is a regular presenter at juvenile law certification training for district court judges. Along with Jane Malpass she has presented at National CASA conferences since 1992 and numerous state CASA association conferences. Jane is the parent of two adopted daughters.
